I may revoke this authorization to the extent allowed by law. If I do, I understand that Northern Arizona Allergy may have already released information about me after I gave permission. I know that revoking this authorization would not prohibit any release of information by Northern Arizona Allergy in reliance on my original authorization.

I can revoke my authorization by:

1) Writing a letter to Northern Arizona Allergy. If I write a letter to Northern Arizona Allergy, it must say that I want to revoke my authorization to disclose the patient's healthcare information. My letter must include the name or other specific identification of the person(s) that I no longer want to receive information. I (or my authorized representative for healthcare) must sign and date the letter.

Once Northern Arizona Allergy gives out the information that I want released, I know that Northern Arizona Allergy has no control over the information. The individual or organization that I authorized to receive the information might re-disclose it. Federal or state privacy laws may no longer protect the information.
